

"Did you know that, besides the current 24 official languages, there are still around 60 regional and minority languages in the European Union? And you, how many languages do you know?"

"Linguistic skills are an instrument of personal and professional development, which are more and more important to ensure a greater inclusion in society and a better integration in the job market. And you, how many languages do you know?"

"Language learning is an important instrument for a better intercultural understanding and comprehension and, consequently, a way to fight against xenophobia and racism. And you, how many languages do you know?"

"Language learning as a privileged mean of access to knowledge, to other cultures and to mobility, expressing the European regional culture diversity, therefore should be protected and stimulated. And you, how many languages do you know?"

"Multilingualism brings closer European citizens, respecting cultural diversity, and makes Europe, more and more, a space for communication, dialogue and gathering of their people and regions. And you, how many languages do you know?"